What is Project Pegasus?

Project Pegasus is a joint agency initiative that delivers an enhanced 'vigilance' capability within the aviation community of Durham, providing a hostile environment for the threat from terrorism and organised crime, such as illegal immigration and smuggling to the United Kingdom.

Through enhanced criminal and counter terrorism awareness, and the exchange of information and intelligence between border policing partners and the aviation community, our airfields and environs can continue to be a safe place to live, work and relax.

How Does Project Pegasus work?

Project Pegasus, through the provision of a localised number, provides a structure for the reporting of unusual activity or behaviour within the aviation community believed or suspected to be linked to acts of terrorism or organised crime.

Whilst it is almost impossible to say with any certainty what a criminal or a terrorist might look like, an individual's activity or behaviour can become suspicious in the context of the location they are in.

Likewise, the unexpected or unusual presence of an aircraft or associated cargo may give rise to concern to members of the community.

Project Pegasus allows for the collation and assessment of all information and intelligence relating to suspicious activity or behaviour where it is believed to be linked to organised crime, terrorist activity or other threats to our borders. It provides a mechanism for the deployment of resources from border policing partners in response to a potential or defined threat.

What are the signs of Criminal or Terrorist Activity?

1. Tests of Security

Attempts to test security and response times when entering restricted areas.

2. Surveillance

Individuals taking pictures and making notes of security measures or procedures. Prolonged activity in one area.

3. Equipment

Individuals buying unusual equipment or items such as chemicals, uniforms, badges.

4. Suspicious Characters

People whose actions do not fit into the daily or normal routine of the area.
