

Project Kraken

Protecting our land from sea to shore

People who live and work along the region's coastline are being invited to help protect their community from crime and terrorism as part of a new initiative being supported by Durham Police.

Project Kraken is a national campaign which aims to increase vigilance along the UK's coastline and encourage the community to work together to help combat any criminal or suspicious activity at harbours and marinas. It forms part of the Government's National Counter Terrorist Strategy CONTEST.

By becoming involved in Project Kraken members of the maritime community are encouraged to report any criminal or suspicious activity to police.

Suspicious activity could be the unusual presence of a vessel, cargo or people within ports or marinas, but whatever it is;

If you suspect it then report it
